History:

Long Alec was a tall Indian who owned a store in Curlew. He was also the de-facto sheriff for the area. Curlew was the junction where Tecumseh Sherman and his boundary negotiating party came down off the Kettle Crest in 1883 on their way to the Okanogan. by way of what is now Boulder-Deer Creek Pass then called Deadman Creek.

Cautions:

Treat surface water before drinking. Prepare for all weather. Watch out for large animals. No facilities and limited parking.
